Beef is cheaper in South America, where the illimitable pampas are covered anywhere else in the world. It is also very cheap in Texas, where cattle are raised almost without any other cost than that of herding them. Experiments have recently been made having for their ultimate object the furnishing of this cheap beef of South America and Texas to those ountries where meat is now the dearest article of food. This is to be done by extracting all the nutriment from the flesh

It is said that Mr. Gail Borden has perfected an invenion that will do this work, and will soon stablish a factory in Texas, where beef can be procured at cheaper prices than at the North. Mr. Borden's experiments were begun in 1849, and in 1851 his "meat biscuit" was introduced into the narket. CURES CANCERS OF FROM

FOR CONGRESS LOVELL H. ROUSSEAU

TUESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1866.

We are requested to say that J. Mar-shall Crawford, candidate for Marshal of the City Court, is not one of the radical Crawfords, as some seem to think. As proof of his status in this respect, it is only necessary to say that during the en-tire war he was a member of Mosby's famous Confederate cavalry in Virginia.

Thus spoke the Courier before the election. Yes, that bitterly disloyal organ actually electioneered for a candidate upon the express ground that he fought all through the war in Mosby's band, the worst and most destructive of all the bands of guerrillas that robbed and burned and killed and devastated during the rebellion. The fact of his connection with that band is shamelessly thrust upon our people as a

And a Mr. E. A. Hathaway, candidate for Judge in Owen county, hearing that some charge of loyalty was made or insinuated against him, procured and published this certificate, duly signed by a rebel friend:

Mr. Hathaway escaped through the Federal lines and came to Bowling Green, bringing several men with him, who joined the Southern army. Mr. Hathaway, with Colonel Jo Morchead, had authority to Colonel Jo Moreneau, man pro-raise and organize a regiment, and proceeded to enlist a number of men. The Southern army fell back out of Kentucky in February, 1862, and I saw but little of Mr. Hathaway until about May, 1862. In June, 1862, Mr. Hathaway came to see me and informed me that Colonel Morehead had been constructed and that the regiment had been captured and that the regiment was about to fall through. I thought Mr. was about to fall through. I thought Mr.
Hathaway too old to go into the army as a private, and I knew that he could not live in the South without means, and I advise Mr. Hathaway to return home and do the best he could. Mr. Hathaway expressed himself desirous to remain in the South, provided he could obtain a position by which he could make a support.

Many, no doubt, must find it difficult to realize that the time has come, and now | we believe that it will be, the country cantheir advantage to show that in the war they went into the rebel service and unity, friendship, and brotherhood, is re fought against their country. But, alas! it is. A certificate of having borne arms in and for the rebellion is held by many a rebel or ex-rebel and his friends our fears of the terrible future will be as a plume in his cap, a flower in his chap- greatly increased. We believe that the let, a diamond in the circlet of his deeds. Where are we? Upon what kind of times have we happened? What is in store for shall strengthen the President's arms in us in the future? To what point will the remium on disloyalty probably go up? How long before some of Grant's veterans may, if accused of having been with that lorious old leader, feel constrained, like St. Peter, to say "Verily we know not the

Never before was there a case where men rebelled against their government, strove to subvert and shatter it, failed in their efforts, laid down their arms, threw themselves upon the mercy of the conqueror, swore oaths of submission and allegiance, obtained gracious and magnanimous pardon, and then had the effrontery to assume that their treasonable action against the Governmen was good ground upon which to expect and to demand the right to control it and to seize its honors and emoluments! No. there is nothing like this in all mortal history-nothing in the slightest degree approaching it; and Heaven grant that there may never be in the future. The times are terribly "out of joint". Who would not have been deemed a madman. if, at the glorious close of the rebellion, he disloyalty would put on high and insolent airs in the presence of lovalty, and that the disloyal would assume the right to elbow

A great event takes place to-day. n event which may not improbably exert powerful influence upon the political affairs of the country. The Union Na tional Convention meets, this day, in Philadelphia, for the avowed purpose of conperfect harmony between the two great ne members will go no further than simply to advise and recommend earnestly upon any portion of the people. We are glad to see that large numbers of the delegates from both sections are part of the wind out of the sails of the among the very first and ablest men of the | Convention's opponents in the Northern whole nation. There are not a few of States. Those opponents have been enthem whose names are destined to be his- deavoring to make the impression upon torical. We do not believe that any nather popular mind that the Philadelphia tional convention or other deliberative assemblage, ever held in the United States. embodied as much ability as this will. And we deeply rejoice that this is so, for the momentous matters to be considered and discussed will require all the talent lessly beneath the tide of popular con-brought to bear upon them.

We confidently believe that a large majority of the delegates will come together in a proper spirit, a spirit of conciliation and justice, a spirit intent only upon healing the wounds of a sorely-wounded and deeply-afflicted country. Unquestionably light that it has been already in advance claiming seats in the Convention, men violent and vituperative in speech, men who are always extreme in their views, who have no conciliation in their natures, and who are ever seeking to distinguish themselves by insolence and bluster; but we trust that all such, if they get within the doors of the Convention, will, upon the first exhibition of their turbulent and unpatriotic disposition, be very quickly and sternly and effectually disposed of by the calm and resolute majority. Persons evidently hostile to the accomplishment. by fair and judicious means, of the great purposes for which the Convention assem bles, should not be tolerated by it.

If the action of the assemblage is what not but be vastly benefitted by it. A spirit of the most thorough loyalty, a spirtt of quired by the dark and threatening exigency of the times, and, if such a spirit fails to control the mass of the delegates. Convention is now, next to President Johnson, the nation's best hope. If it his sublime conflict with the blind giant of radicalism, if it shall exert an influence in favor of his brave and mighty efforts to terminate the present tempestuous, chaotic, and anomalous condition of our national affairs and to re-establish solid. just, beneficent, constitutional government and constitutional freedom over the whole of the old Union, if in fine it shall do anything to check the raging and roaring disloyalty and treason visible and audible in all parts of the country, it will deserve and receive the blessings of this generation and of posterity.

The Courier puts forth an article of considerable length, arguing that the true policy of its party is to let Gen. Rousseau be returned to Congress without opposition. We hope that our neighbor has influence enough with his party to be able to carry out his views upon this subject, but we greatly doubt it. A good many of his friends in this district have got Congress on the brain, and we don't believe that it can be removed by any operation short of trepanning. No doubt they would willingly yield much in defer ence to their organ, but there are sacrifices to which aspiring human nature cannot and will not submit.

If the Duvall Democrats of this district unite in the policy of returning Gen. Rousseau to fill the vacancy made by his own resignation, they will thereby show We heartily agree with the South- more liberality than we have believed them ern papers as to the propriety and im- to possess. > But we do not as yet believe that they are as tolerant as their organ represents them. Even if they support Rousseau, which, as we have said, we think extremely problematical, we shall, whilst giving them | the average sense of the present members all the credit they deserve, have doubts as to their general liberality. If Gen. Rousseau were a candidate under any ordinary circumstances, indeed under any other circumstances than those which now ex ist, he would not, we fully believe, have the smallest chance of getting the votes of any of their number. He wouldn't even be talked of by them as a candidate, except as a candidate to be demolished. The Courier says, that, since the publication of the unauthorized statement that he would not be a candidate, nearly a score of persons have been spoken of for the vacant place, and we all know that several have een publicly nominated. But we venture to say, that, among all those nominated and all those spoken of in connection with increase the pay of the half-starved clerks the vacant office, there isn't one who wasn't either a fighter for the rebellion or a notorious sympathizer with it and wellforward to increase the pay of the clerks? wisher of it. Excluded from the Philadelphia Convention.

It will be seen by our special dispatche from Philadelphia that the decision has been arrived at unanimously to exclude Mr. Vallandigham and all of his trib from the Convention. It is a move in the ections of the republic and establishing | right direction and a happy augury of equal rights in both. We presume that harmony and victory. It is the first step to make the Convention a success, and a step that is absolutely indispensable. Every man of the least sagacity has foreseen that in order to pre vent this impression from taking firm possession of the public mind, the entire exclusion from the Convention of the class of politicians referred to would be essential; and we reiterate our unfeigned deof the meeting resolved upon unani mously. We confidently expected the evil spirits in question would be excluded, but we could hardly expect that the de cision to this end would be unanimous This is a result altogether better than, in these days of political blindness and passion, we expected. It is a glorious beginning, a precious omen.

No doubt it is necessary to the good nfluences of the Philadelphia Convention hat Vallandigham and such as he should e excluded, and yet we cannot but regret the existence of the necessity. We are sorry that men conscious of being traitors men aware of having done everything i their power against the Union and still hating it with a vengeful hatred, men knowing in their own hearts that they cherish no dearer wish than that another ebellion should be inaugurated at the first opportunity, have the audacity to endeavor to thrust themselves into a Convention got up for broad, beneficent, patriotic, national purposes. They wish to go into it with fireorands in their bands, and it is doubtless important that the incendiaries shall be exclusion of such evil spirits as Vallandigham may be calculated to create discontent in the minds of a portion of the Southern members and thus to prevent the harmony that is so vastly important. But if it prove true, as we earnestly hope it may, that the Southern members themlves are for the exclusion of the pestilent spirits, no danger need be apprehended on this score. Still, questions difficult of solution are likely to arise. If Vallandigham is excluded, what others shall b excluded with him? How far shall the exclusion go? To how many shall it extend? What should the test be? We rely upon the wisdom and the patriotism and the prudence of the noble statesmen gathered at Philadelphia to solve all difficulties in a spirit of conciliation and in the mode best adapted to se cure harmonious feeling and action. We have a right to presume that no delegates will be shut out except those whose hostility to the Union is perfectly notorious North and South.

They are publishing the late speeches of Mr. Vallandigham in Kentucky and Mr. Pendleton's speech at LOUISVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY, Flemingsburg, in this State, as excellent campaign documents on the Republican side north of the Ohio river. Io triumphe! remember Secessionists of Kentucky, Io triumphe! Your triumphs are widently not yet ended! The Secession leaders of Kentucky assured the people that it was necessary they should triumph in order to defeat the Radicals of the North Our readers will not have to wait long to see the consequences of the result here. As well attempt to bind the forked lightning as attempt to prevent the operations of cause and effect. We are not pleased with the tone of a paragraph in the local columns of veserday's Journal noticing the arrival of Gen. Humphrey Marshall from New Orleans on a visit to his family in Henry county. The character and purpose of the distinguished gentleman's visit to his old home, to say nothing of his great and universally-acknowledged ability, should cure him against any mention that could even be construed as disrespectful. We hope that his sojourn in Kentucky will be a pleasant one.

That this long-established reliability should be eschewed, and a single unavoida ble accident made the pretext of abusive criticism by writers for the press, is highly censurable. But these attempts to affect the good name of the Mail Line will prove abortive. The traveling public, who have at all times reposed confidence in the safety of the mail packets, cannot be swerved from that reliance by misrepresentations.

The recent change of time by the Mail Line was agreed upon in the spirit of that competition which is the life of trade. As we understand and believe, there was no unfriendliness toward the People's tine, (which had first changed the time of its boats from 12 to 11 A. M.), and we know there was no

A Fish Story. In 1824 the celebrated Chancellor Bibb, of Kentucky, whose piscatorial propensities surpassed probably any other disciple of Old Isaac Walton, and who had enjoyed that delightful amusement oftener, and with more intense interest than any other man, visited the little town of Falmouth, Kentucky, to spend a few months in the silent enjoyment of his favorite amusement. ment.

Dining with his friend B, as was his usual wont, an appointment was made to meet at four o'clock, just below the confluent streams of the Main Licking with its south fork in sight of the little city. His friend found him with his pantaloons pulled up to his knees, out on the point of a bar, silent as a sucker, enjoying the expectation of a "glorious nibble." Taking a position just below, he very cautiously and silently (for the Judge would not suffer a stone to be moved) threw out his line, and remained some half an hour in statu quo. B., observing a large "red horse B., observing a large "red horse" wriggling through the water not far from the shore—one that had been crippled in getting through the mill-race on the south fork, about one hundred yards above—and concluding to give His Honor a surprise, laid down his fishing pole, and deliberately rolling uphis own pants and sleeves, which the former observing, inquired of B: "What are you going to do?" The latter answered that he had become tired and impatient, and was determined to go in and see if he could not catch a fish. The Judge thinking it a foolish jest, barely replied "humph." Judge thinking it a foolish jest, barely replied "humph."
His friend B., however, advanced knee deep into the water. The fish, which up to that time had been almost stationary, made another wriggle forward, and stopped nearly at his feet. Reaching down he caught it, and turning round threw it out upon the sand-bank, where it flounced about in an element entirely new.

The Judge laid down his rod, straightened himself up in perfect astonishment, and turning to his friend, said, with great composure and strong emphasis, "I'll be dammed if I ever heard of such fishing as that before." damned if I ever heard of such ashing as that before."

His friend never explained to him the trick, and probably the Judge has not often told the story, fearing it would be called a fish story.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
